

The Doomsday Clock

The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists was founded in 1945 by scientists who worked on the Manhattan Project at the University of Chicago and were deeply concerned about the potential future use of nuclear weapons and nuclear war.

The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists has informed the world [of the danger of nuclear war] since 1947, when its now-famous "Doomsday Clock" first appeared on the cover of the magazine. Since then, the minute hand of the clock has moved forward and back to reflect the global level of nuclear danger and the state of international security.
