

Returning Home After the Second World War

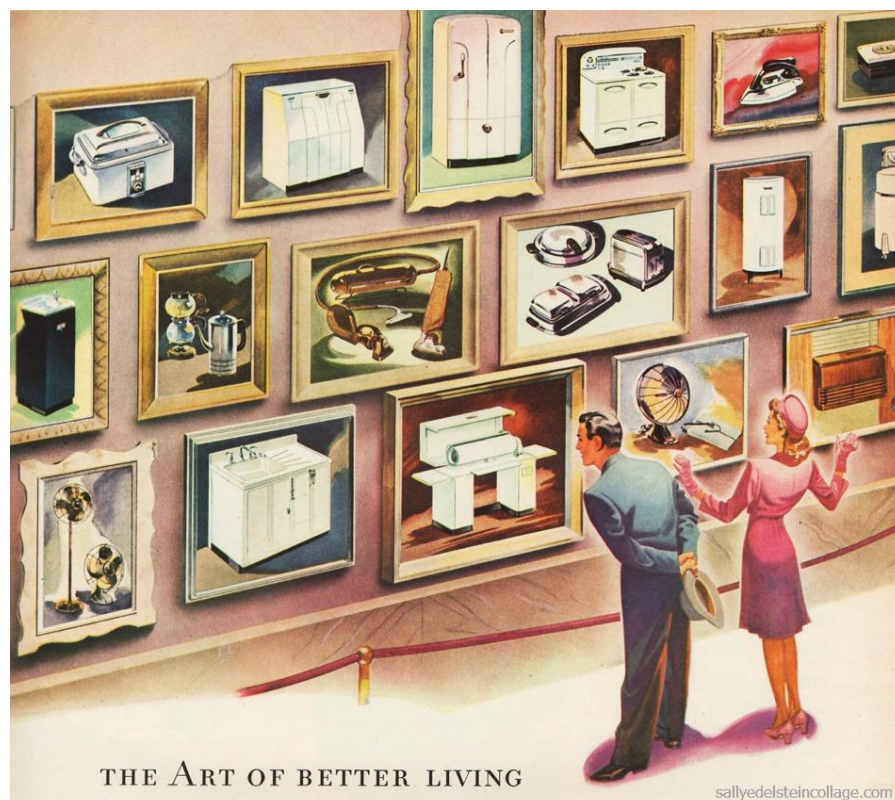

With the collapse of Germany and Japan in 1945, people had to adjust to living in a world that had changed dramatically since the beginning of the Second World War.

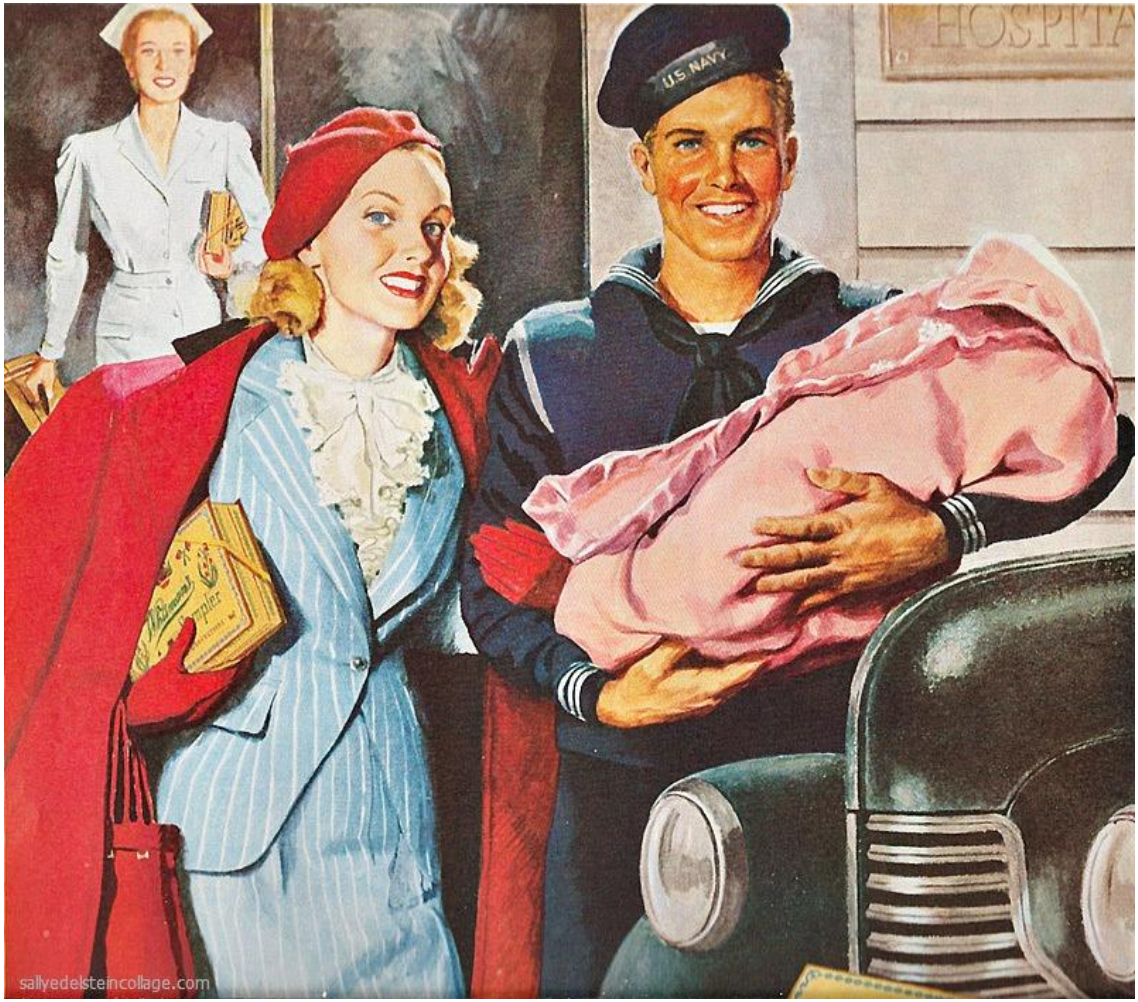

What were some of the things that happened during the Second World War that changed the way North Americans saw the world?

After living through a World War, what do you think people wanted out of life?

What are the following images telling people about the US and Canada after the Second World War?
